Indian construction industry employs 32 million people and its total market size is estimated at ₹2,48,000 crores (35,640 million €). The level of a country's development is reflected by its infrastructure and the desperate need for infrastructure development has increased the demand of the construction industry in India.

Today, India is one of the fastest growing economies in the world. The Indian construction industry is an integral part of the economy. It is poised for growth on account of industrialization, urbanization, economic development and people's rising expectations for improved quality of living. Construction is expected to be the biggest beneficiary of the surge in infrastructure investment.

The construction sector is a major employment driver, being the second largest employer in the country, next only to agriculture. This is because of the chain of backward and forward linkages that the sector has with other sectors of the economy. About 250 ancillary industries such as cement, steel, brick, timber and building material are dependent on the construction industry.

The activities of the construction industry include working on new structures as well as additions, alterations, and repairs to existing ones.

Prospects and Future Outlook:

Construction accounts for nearly 65 per cent of the total investment in infrastructure. Investment in construction accounts for nearly 11 per cent of India's GDP. A big risk which the developers are facing is the price risk. The other risks to which of the developers are exposed is demand risk like ability to provide quality, safety, environment, social aspects and timeline of completion. There is the finance risk also.
